SISTERS of '77

Twenty thousand people from across the U.S. gathered in Houston on a historic weekend in November 1977 for the first federally funded National Women's Conference. SISTERS OF '77 is a fascinating look at that pivotal weekend, an event that not only changed the lives of the women who attended, but the lives of Americans everywhere.

The film SISTERS OF '77 captures an historic event. On the table at the 1977 conference were countless hot-button issues that ran the gamut of American women's concerns: equal pay, day care, healthcare, minority rights, abortion, lesbian rights and workplace discrimination.

In the crowd were former first ladies Betty Ford and Lady Bird Johnson, current first lady Rosalyn Carter and women of all ages, ethnicities and political backgrounds.

You're Invited to Watch Herstory

Combining footage of the conference with interviews—both then and now—with influential women's leaders such as Barbara Jordan, Bella Abzug, Betty Friedan, Gloria Steinem, Eleanor Smeal, Ann Richards and Coretta Scott King, the film SISTERS OF '77 is a fascinating look at that pivotal weekend in 1977, an event that not only changed the lives of the women who attended, but the lives of Americans everywhere. Women in America have come a long way, SISTERS OF '77 reveals how.

Please join us for a special viewing of this historical film, shown on Equal Pay Day, the day we mark the additional days into the new year the average woman must work to earn the same as the average man did in the prior year.
